education for a longer period. She simply read upto Class-V. She locked in wedlock at the age of 15 with a day labourer at Jugihuda village in the aforesaid upazila. But marriage could not change her fate.

In the meantime, she became a mother.

In 2006, an incident has changed her lifestyle by opening up a new avenue for her. Aleya was poor but she was an admirer of beauty. Since childhood, gardening was her favourite hobby. She created a beautiful flower garden at her courtyard. One day, her garden attracted attention of a motorbike rider. The motorbike rider came down from his vehicle and asked a child standing nearby about the beautiful garden. The child happened to be the eldest child of Aleya. In reply, the child told the stranger that her mother had created the garden. When Aleya emerged from indoors, the stranger gave his identity as manager of Dhaka Ahsania Mission. He informed her about the activities of Dhaka Ahsania Mission Jaba Mohila Unnyan Dal at Jugihuda village since 1998.

The Dhaka Ahsania Mission official further informed Aleya about countrywide massive cultivation of flower on commercial scale. He said the soil of Maheshpur is congenial for flower cultivation. If Aleya desires, Dhaka Ahsania Mission can come forward in her assistance to launch a venture.

Taking permission from her husband, Aleya became a member of Jaba Mohila Unnyan Dal. She started attending weekly group meetings and began to save Tk 10 regularly. She read books on flower cultivation from the Ganokendro. Later, she underwent a three-day training on nursery and flower cultivation imparted by Dhaka Ahsania Mission. On an exposure visit, she went to Bagachra flower farm in Sharsha upazila of Jessore district. There she was ashtonised to see the flower gardens on a vast tract of land. Aleya recollected the message of Prophet (Peace Be Upon Him). From this spot she came to know that floriculture is an industry which has a bright prospect. Besides meeting up the country's requirement, flowers also fetched valuable forex for the country. She learnt that local flower cultivators straightaway supply flowers to the wholesalers in Dhaka. Being inspired, Aleya returned home to become a flower cultivator in its right sense. Later, she took loan amounting to Tk 15,000 from Dhaka Ahsania Mission. Adding money from own source, she took lease one bigha of land in cooperation with her husband and started flower cultivation on a wide scale. From then on, Aleya never looked back. With blessings from all, she became a successful entrepreneur. She expanded her farm by cultivating various types of flowers. Now every week she picks up flower from her gardens. By implementing the project, self-employed Aleya also created job opportunities for the women members of 10 to 12 families in her locality. Following her footsteps, many other women also started flower cultivation at their village.

Cancer specialists' observation at workshop

15.5 cr children to be affected additionally by skin, eye cancer due to climate change

An additional 10 crore children will be affected by skin cancer due to climate change by the year of 2075. More five and a half crore children will be affected by eye cancer. About 9,000 children are being attacked with cancer annually. About 44% of cancer-affected children die prematurely as their parents cannot afford high treatment cost of the disease. Because of lack of cancer registration (statistics), actual scenario is more dreadful. Thousands of children die every year due to lack of timely detection of cancer, wrong treatment and lack of proper treatment. Less than 500 children receive hospital treatment. Speakers observed this at a roundtable media conference on Exploration and Setting Priorities for Childhood Cancer in Bangladesh" jointly organised by Ahsania Mission Cancer Hospital, Foundation for Research and Development Dhaka and British Columbia Cancer Agency Canada [See page 3]
